

Orthopedic Dog Beds

by: Lianna B. Jones

Orthopedic dog mattresses are designed for your dog to be more comfortable, healthy, and happy. There are many types of mattresses with a variety of price and quality. What exactly do orthopedic dog mattresses do? What are the different styles of beds for dogs? And how do you know if one is right for your pet? Orthopedic mattresses for dogs are quite a unique product, and hopefully you will find out how they can help your pet canine.

Orthopedic dog mattresses are designed for both younger and older dogs. They are built to be more comfortable than the average dog bed you would buy at the pet store. They are also especially made for the older dog with arthritis or young dog with hip or elbow dysplasia. Since orthopedic dog beds are specially made to be more comfortable for dogs with joint pains, they are usually more expensive, and usually range from around $75 to $750! There are many different types of dog beds. There are different sizes and shapes. All orthopedic mattresses are supposed to help with younger or older dogs with hip or elbow dysplasia or arthritis. Below are some orthopedic mattresses that might help out your dog.

The World's Best Dog Bed, by Regin Sleep Systems is a rectangular mattress with many sizes. It has three different thickness sizes and three different length sizes. This dog bed is made to last for many years and range from $229-$458.

The Orthopedic Comfort Top dog mattress is a reversible Memory-foam mattress with a washable cover and is specially made for older dogs. They also have different sizes and range from $96-$158.

Big Dog Beds has some pretty unique orthopedic dog beds. They are filled with Max-Comfort memory-foam and help with arthritis or hip dysplasia. They have a very wide range of sizes, styles, and prices.
Orthopedic Dog Bed

SnoozAir's orthopedic dog Air beds are easy-clean, portable air mattresses for dogs. They are round mattresses and are "built to last." They range from $85-100.

How do you find a dog bed for your pet? It depends on your dog's needs. Does your dog have trouble with dysplasia or arthritis? Is it painful to watch your dog get up from where she's been laying, first getting up on her front paws and slowly, as if cramped, bring her hips up to standing position? If so, then maybe an orthopedic dog bed would be helpful and healthy for your dog. Since there are many different kinds of dog beds, not every one may be right for your dog. A veterinarian will be able to determine what your dog needs. Make sure you check with your dog's veterinarian for further information on a right pick for your dog's bed. Orthopedic dog mattresses can help your dog be more comfortable, healthy, and happy. There are a large variety of styles, sizes, and shapes of orthopedic dog beds. Find the mattress that will give your dog the best night's sleep.